

Prof. Sung-Jong HONG

Professor

Chung-Ang University, Korea

ACADEMIC QUALIFICATIONS

- 1975 - 1979: College of Veterinary Medicine, Seoul National University, DVM.
1982 - 1988: Dept of Medicine, Graduate School, Seoul National University, Ph.D.
1990 - 1992: Post-doctoral fellow, State University of NY at Buffalo, NY, USA
2002 - 2006: Research associate prof, State University of NY at Buffalo, NY, USA

MAIN RESEARCH INTEREST

- Functional genomics and immunodiagnosis of clonorchiasis
- Chemotactic behaviors of Clonorchis sinensis

AWARDS

- Academic Award, 2000, Korean Society for Parasitology.
- Distinguished Research Award in Health Sciences, 2007, Chung-Ang University, Korea.

Prof. Paiboon Sithithaworn

Professor

Khon Kaen University, Thailand

A. Personal Statement

Having worked in Khon Kaen University in northeast Thailand which is the epicenter of opisthorchiasis and cholangiocarcinoma for more than 25 years, my research field covers a range of topics from population genetics of the liver fluke, molecular diagnosis of opisthorchiasis and epidemiology of the hepatobiliary disease and cholangiocarcinoma (CCA). My research in this neglected parasitic disease and associated cancer being conducted is done through domestic and international collaboration.

In addition to research, my duty is teaching in Parasitology and related subjects for undergraduate and post graduate courses in the Medical and various Faculties in Khon Kaen University.

B. Positions and honors

Honors and awards

1995 Visiting Research Fellows at Institute of Tropical Medicine, Nagasaki University, Japan

1999-2012 Technical advisor for FAO on Food borne Trematode

1990-present Reviewed manuscripts for Parasitology, Acta Tropica, Korean Journal of Parasitology, Transaction, PlosNTD etc

1985-present Member of Parasitology and Tropical Medicine Association of Thailand

2005-present Member of Haematological Society of Thailand

2012 Diamond Research Scholar, Khon Kaen University
